EMPOWERING FUTURE GENERATIONS

SCIENCE MATTERS

2019

MONTSHIRE MUSEUM OF SCIENCE
DEAR FRIENDS,

Any successful year at the Montshire includes equal elements of serious science and playful learning. The serious side is behind the scenes. It involves the presentation of accurate, relevant science topics using evidence-based methods to achieve carefully formulated learning goals. The playful side is a bit more obvious! Laughter, curiosity, and joyful moments of discovery light up the faces of our thousands of visitors, young and old. This combination is intentional. Research shows that emotions like joy and surprise have a positive impact on the quality of learning.

A seminal study in the field of informal science education estimates that 95% of what we learn about science takes place outside a school classroom. This kind of learning is known as “informal” science education, and it has the power to inspire generations of scientists and critical thinkers. It’s at the heart of American innovation.

We hope that your experiences at the Montshire spark new interests, pique your curiosity, and bring you and your family back to the Museum for many years to come.

Thank you for supporting the important work outlined in this annual report. I am particularly grateful to Jay Benson for leading the Board of Trustees throughout the 2019 fiscal year, and I am pleased and honored to be following in his footsteps.

SCOTT BROWN
Chair, Board of Trustees

SCIENCE MATTERS

In order to dream, build, and share the innovations that will help address the world’s challenges, we need to cultivate curious minds that will pave the way for a brighter future.

At the Montshire Museum of Science, we know that the word “science” doesn’t just refer to lab coats, formulas, and microscopes. The realm of science is rich and broad, encompassing so much of the world around us: math, music, engineering, nature, chemistry, puzzles, art, and beyond.

Studying science is a crucial and rewarding experience that imparts life lessons that help to shape people intellectually, emotionally, and socially—building a strong foundation for future leaders. Here are a few skills that a healthy dose of science learning can develop.

Problem-Solving Skills
Every science moment presents the opportunity to explore and uncover new information. Reaching that point of discovery requires problem-solving skills, which include asking questions, identifying a problem, trying new approaches, and remaining determined and persistent through it all.

Curiosity
So many advances have been made thanks to unrelenting curiosity. Science education encourages people to ask “Why?” not just once, but over and over again—testing their hunches—until they find an answer (or more questions).

Creativity
Science isn’t just about methodology and processes. It’s about being bold and open, experimenting, and trying new things to meet a challenge or opportunity.

Flexibility
Life is unpredictable. Science demands flexibility. It teaches young minds to adapt to new situations, outcomes, and discoveries, and to pivot accordingly, utilizing their STEM knowledge to adjust to new situations.

Critical Thinking
Science education strengthens the ability to analyze and synthesize data to make decisions based on findings. Through practice, young learners can develop the skills needed to think critically and to confidently move forward with a decision.

Collaboration
Scientific inquiry doesn’t happen in isolation. It is a collaborative process. To make new discoveries, scientists must share knowledge, offer trust and support, and work together towards their common goal.

SCIENCE IS FOR EVERYONE

Helping a Local Family Find a Warm Welcome at the Montshire

In 2015, facing single motherhood and difficult financial circumstances, Kayce Mae Penn, of Thetford, Vermont, put her resourcefulness to work. She dedicated herself to providing her two daughters with a happy childhood.

“One saving grace my children and I had was a discounted membership to the Montshire Museum of Science,” she said. “If you are a recipient of (adult) Medicaid or the Three Squares program like we once were, you can purchase a membership to the Montshire at an incredibly affordable price. Every weekend I would bring my girls here to enjoy themselves.”

Penn learned about the Montshire’s Warm Welcome program through a staff member at The Family Place in Norwich, Vermont.

“For me, our weekly visits to the Montshire alleviated some of that (single parent) guilt,” Penn said. “We were incredibly lucky that I could provide us with food, a warm home, and a working vehicle. Visits to the Museum were icing on the cake. I had to remind myself how lucky we were to have a resource like it nearby.”

Through its Warm Welcome program, the Montshire Museum of Science offers visits to the Museum, memberships, and scholarships to families with low incomes. Approximately 25% of all Montshire members participate via the Warm Welcome program. Eligible families can purchase a 12-month membership for $20, which offers unlimited visits all year for up to six people. Alternatively, visitors can choose single-day admission for $3 per person. The program is designed to support households with incomes up to 200% of the federal poverty limit.

“When I talk to young mothers, I tell them, ‘This will help you survive!’ I appreciate the Museum as an invaluable resource for providing quality time to teach and learn with a hands-on approach that spurs creativity.”

Making A Deeper Commitment to Inclusion and Accessibility

As a result, the Montshire has created several new resources, including sensory kits for visitors to check out, detailed pre-visit information on our website so visitors know what to expect, and preliminary plans for low-sensory hours at the Museum. We also altered several restrooms to provide privacy and comfort for anyone with special needs, including those with limited mobility.

“The Montshire is a great resource for participants in our Aspire program, and we look forward to a continued partnership with the Museum,” said Jayne Wolfe, Program Director of the Special Needs Support Center in Lebanon, New Hampshire.

Providing Resources for Climate Change Education

Since 2016, the Montshire has partnered with the Gulf of Maine Research Institute and the Maine Discovery Museum in the Real World, Real Science initiative, which explores how global NASA data sets can be combined with local data to provide resources for climate change education. Climate change is one of the most pressing issues facing our society today. Providing opportunities for families and students to work with local and global information contributes to their greater understanding of how to interpret climate data.

One of the Montshire’s roles in this project is to develop data-based climate education workshops and a unique weather and climate exhibit experience that will be shared with 11 informal science centers across Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts, and New York.

Over the past year, the Montshire developed and prototyped workshop experiences that focus on local “ice-out” data, ticks, and changes in weather and climate.

WORKSHOP EXPERIENCES

By the Numbers
This workshop provides students with multiple opportunities to visualize data around temperature, weather, and climate through examining the community-collected ice-out data from Joe’s Pond in West Danville, Vermont. Complexity in data and climate topics are incorporated throughout the workshop to help guide students through the stages of perceiving, interpreting, and comprehending big data.

Weather, Climate & You
This workshop and exhibit experience provide an opportunity for students to improve their data literacy skills, and learn about weather and climate using personally relevant data—the average temperature in Norwich, Vermont on the day they were born. Participants plot their birthday data alongside others to visualize the average climate in Norwich over time.

Ticks Up Close
Participants use microscopes to observe local tick species, and learn how the most common tick species on the East Coast spread Lyme disease. They discuss the many ecosystem and climate factors that affect tick populations.

Over the past year, these workshops were prototyped with 11 school groups and 190 participants, and the exhibit experience for Weather, Climate & You was prototyped during February and April break camps with 1,872 people.

Next year, the 11 science centers across New England and New York will prototype the lessons and exhibit experience in their museums. All partners work together in a Climate Change Education Community of Practice to develop best practices in learning experiences around this urgent topic.

Throughout the year, the Montshire has worked with numerous local organizations to enhance the science education experience. From creating exhibitions to developing program activities, we are grateful for the role that our community partners have played in supporting the Montshire and enriching science learning.

Upper Valley Trails Alliance
Thanks to the help of volunteers from Upper Valley Trails Alliance and Hypertherm, our trails have been well maintained throughout the year!

Simon Pearce
The Montshire partnered with Simon Pearce to develop the exhibition, Elements of Glass: From the Workshop of SIMON PEARCE, which explores the scientific process of turning sand to glass.

Program Partners
Through partnerships with Hanover Garden Club and the Sierra Club, the Montshire offered a greater selection of adult programming that included the conversation series Women in Conservation.

Norwich Public Library
The Montshire and the Norwich Public Library led initiatives focused on the 2019 national summer reading theme “A Universe of Stories.” This included Montshire staff book picks and a hike on the Planet Walk, led by Montshire Executive Director Marcos Stafne.

Dartmouth College
The Montshire continues its ongoing collaboration with Dartmouth College through various projects, including a five-year effort to create new STEM programs for students and teachers in rural New Hampshire and Vermont (made possible through the Science Education Partnership Award from the National Institutes of Health); Dartmouth speakers at Montshire events; and program partnerships with the Hopkins Center for the Arts.
SCIENCE, THANKS TO YOU!

The board and staff of the Montshire are grateful for every contribution. Thank you for supporting the joy of science.

IN MEMORIAM

Bob Raiselis, the Montshire's Director of Exhibits/Associate Director from 2010–2018, passed away on December 30, 2018. Bob was instrumental in conceptualizing and building many of the Montshire's most beloved exhibits, including Bubbles: Science in Soap, Air, Works, and Toys: The Inside Story, among many others. Over the course of Bob's 23 years in the Exhibits department, millions of visitors benefited from his passionate commitment to joyful science learning. The Montshire is grateful to those donors who made memorial contributions in his honor, which support the Montshire's scholarship fund.
The following donors have informed the Montshire that they have included the Museum in their estate plans through a bequest, bequest intention, trust, retirement plan, life insurance policy, or life income gift.
